Society Pioneered In Advice To U. S. Farmers

More than 3,000 Jewish families, aggregating nearly 20,000 persons, have been settled on farms in sixteen states since 1913, it was reported by Dr. Garbiel Davidson, managing director. Dr. Davidson summarized the society's aid to Jewish farmers in the United States since it was organized fifty years ago.

Since its farm-settlement program was begun thirty years ago 3,020 families were established on farms and 30,485 persons came to the society for advice in settling on the land. In 1949 alone 271 families were placed on farms in California, Connecticut, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, and Ohio, Dr. Davidson said.

The success of the movement is shown by the fact that only 152 of the 1,209 families settled in the last decade have left their farms, Dr. Davidson said. While the society does not claim all credit for the growth of Jewish farm settlements, nevertheless "it is significant," he commented, "that growth took place during the very period in American history when the trend was in the opposite direction, from farm to city."

Since 1900 the society has granted loans totaling $11,500,000 to Jewish farmers in forty-one states. In the last year, which was the most active in the organization's history, it lent $600,000 to farmers in sixteen states, 73 per cent of the sum going to new farmers, refugees and veterans.

In the last thirty years the society has kept agricultural Jews from leaving their farms in the United States and Palestine. It has given advice to 78,000 persons. In addition, advice was given in 48,782 cases at the society's offices.

The society's employment service was begun in 1908. Since then 20,400 persons have been placed in jobs in thirty-two states without charge to either employer or employee.

Among its other functions, the society promotes farm sanitation and public health. In the last thirty years 20,858 visits for this purpose have been made by experts to farms. It is estimated that 250,000 persons in rural communities have heard the lectures on farm sanitation.

Dr. Davidson pointed out that the society established the first (Continued on Page Sixteen)

Was Originator Of Depression Sale Of Apples

Joseph Sicker, sixty-four, a fruit broker with offices at 204 Franklin Street who set out to make the country apple-conscious in the 1920s and originated the idea of street apple stands for the unemployed during the depression years, died at his home, 140 East Eighty-third Street, New York.

Chairman of the New York committee for Apple Week in 1925 with the avowed purpose of persuading the country to eat more apples, Mr. Sicker became chairman of the unemployed relief committee of the International Apple Growers' Association in 1930. Shortly after his campaign opened, small carts and stands with signs reading, "Unemployed, Buy Apples, 6c" sprouted throughout the city and spread to the rest of the country.

By the end of 1930, there were nearly 6,000 men and women selling apples on street corners in New York, and in one six-week period some 20,000,000 apples were sold to the public, reports the New York Herald Tribune. The unemployed apple peddlers would assemble each morning at 56 Harrison Street, the central distribution point in the fruit produce district, collect boxes of apples and head quickly for their stands.

Often earning an average of $8 in eight hours on apples they had bought at $2 a hundred from the fruit merchants, the peddlers became so prosperous that once 200 taxicabs were seen at dawn on Harrison Street waiting to transport them to their street stands. Mr. Sicker was forced to deny publicly that he or the other brokers were participating in the scheme for profit. His representatives announced that they had a 5 per cent commission on apples sold.

Summing up the program in 1931, Mr. Sicker said, "There is no doubt that the apple-selling crusade brought to thousands of unemployed men and women the first money they earned in many months, and the whole thing was pretty free from graft."

Since the depression, Mr. Sicker had taken an active part in fund-raising work for the Salvation Army, the March of Dimes, the United Jewish Appeal and the Greater New York Fund. During the war, he worked for the United Service Organizations. Recently, he was commissioned by the Israeli government to dispose of Palestinian fruit produce in the United States. Mr. Sicker formed his own company, Joseph Sicker (Continued on Page Fifteen)

A.I.C. ASKS U.S. TO BAR ENTRY OF GERMAN ELITE GUARD

A letter of protest against reported American plans to admit as immigrants to the United States Germans and others who served in the German Waffen S. S. (Elite Guard) before and during World War II was sent to Government officials by the World Jewish Congress. The letter, signed by Dr. Robert S. Marcus, Congress political director, was sent to J. Howard McGrath, United States Attorney-General; Ugo Carusi, Chairman, Displaced Persons Commission; and Adrian S. Fisher, legal adviser to the State Department. The letter said that "reliable information" had reached the Congress that former S. S. men were to be admitted. The letter added that the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg had defined the S. S. as a criminal organization and all of its members as criminals.

Says Investment In Israel Is Essential

Sidney Sherwood, secretary of the Export-Import Bank, asserted that the granting of loans to Israel was not enough to build the nation's economic structure and that "expression of confidence in the new state by private business men in the form of actual investment of private funds is essential." Speaking before an assemblage of bankers and business men at the opening of the new six-story building of the Ampel-American Palestine Trading Corporation, 17 East Twenty-first Street, New York, Mr. Sherwood said that "it is the movement, the installation and the use of productive facilities which produce tangible results."

In paying tribute to the corporation's role in stimulating private investments in Israel, Mr. Sherwood, whose bank advanced a $100,000,000 loan to Israel, said he had been deeply impressed on visits there with "Israel's greatest asset—the dedication of one and all to the successful economic development of Israel backed by the will to work."

"It seems to me Israel has redoubled her efforts since this expression by the Export-Import Bank of confidence in her ultimate success," he went on.

"The increased flow of private funds from this country to Israel is gratifying; the role which the United States is playing in private investments and in trade between America and Israel is sound and constructive."

He said that Israel's economic development would help in "laying a foundation of peace in the Middle East."

Wisconsin Warns Resort - Operators On Bias Law

The state of Wisconsin has started a campaign to remove the "Gentiles only" and "Restricted clientele" signs from its biggest business—the resort industry. To lead the campaign the Governor's Commission on Human Rights has named a special resort committee, headed by Prof. L. H. Adolfsen, dean of the extension division of the University of Wisconsin.

The committee has opened its campaign with letters to 6,400 resort, hotel and tourist home operators, reminding them of the state's anti-discrimination law and asking for compliance. The resort division of the State Conservation Commission, under J. H. Alexander, has refused to circulate any resort literature that contains discriminatory phraseology.

The State Highway Department has joined the campaign by agreeing to print the following legend on all of its maps of the Wisconsin resort area: "Wisconsin human rights statute guarantees full and equal enjoyment of all places of public accommodation or amusement alike to all persons of every race and color."

Wisconsin has enlisted the support of other states in the campaign, in the belief that cooperation and joint planning would be the best way to attack the problem. Wisconsin has been joined by representatives from human rights commissions in Illinois and Minnesota. Bruno V. Bitter, a Milwaukee attorney, has been named the chairman of a tri-state committee to fight anti-discrimination by resort operators. It was the tri-state meeting that decided to notify all resort operators of the anti-discrimination laws.

The tri-state group is planning to follow this up with news for resort operators, and to launch a public education program, reports the New York Times.

The letters have brought varying responses from the resort and hotel operators, most of them surprisingly favorable. In eight weeks the resort committee of the Wisconsin Human Rights Commission has received 400 replies. Sixteen of them expressed disapproval.

One resort owner, on receiving notice from the committee that discrimination in resorts was illegal, wrote:

"Dust out a jail cell. I am your prospective client." A Hayward, Wis., owner wrote: "Yes, we are glad to go along on this and very happy that there is such a movement on. If we expect to tell and show other peoples and nations how to get along we must first learn how ourselves."

A Spooner, Wis., operator wrote: "Your letter of March 25 concerning unfair discrimination in the resort business made me a (Continued on Page Fifteen)

Sees Trend Away From Aid To Education

Education for constructive living as American Jews is fast becoming the central theme in American Jewish community life, Michael A. Stavitsky of Newark, N. J., president of the American Association for Jewish Education, declared at the second annual meeting of the Association's Board of Governors, at Atlantic City, N.J. More than 40 Jewish community leaders from 16 major cities throughout the United States attended the session and made plans to translate the increased emphasis on education into a cooperative effort of all organizations and communities to improve Jewish education, at a National Conference on Jewish Education, to be held in New York City in October.

"The entire American Jewish community is moving, more rapidly than any of us are aware, from its previous emphasis on philanthropy and aid to the stricken overseas, to an active understanding of the urgency of developing and improving our educational activities as a means of insuring the future of our community life," Mr. Stavitsky declared. "The American Association, as the only national service agency exclusively concerned with Jewish education, has the grave responsibility today of channeling this new interest into constructive, cooperative actions, so that we may all work together to build an educational system which will really meet our needs as Americans and as Jews."

Judah Pilch, executive director of the Association, pointed out: "We have found in our work throughout the country, that there is an ever-increasing flood of questions about the meanings of Jewish education, its place in American Jewish life, its relation to general American culture, and its (Continued on Page Sixteen)

Council Pleads For Pact On Group Murder

The National Community Relations Advisory Council—the policy-formulating body of six national Jewish organizations and twenty-eight local community councils throughout the country—issued a strong plea for ratification of the United Nations convention against genocide, at the eighth annual meeting, in Atlantic City, and 200 delegates unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon the U. S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee to "report favorably and promptly" on the genocide convention, urging the Senate to ratify the convention in the present session of Congress.

In presenting the resolution to the delegates, Sidney Hollander of Baltimore, chairman of the resolutions committee, asserted that the United States, "under whose leadership the genocide convention was adopted by the United Nations on December 9, 1948, now has the opportunity to demonstrate its leadership of the world democratic community by ratifying promptly the genocide convention." He stressed that other nations were awaiting United States action on the pact against group murder, which must be ratified by twenty nations to become effective, according to the New York Times.

In a panel discussion of misunderstandings and tensions among religious groups in the United States, Dr. Arthur J. S. Rosenbaum, executive director of the Brooklyn Jewish Community Council, declared that "inter-religious tensions cannot be confined to the groups involved but inevitably spill over to the general community. 'Such divisiveness,' he added, 'weakens the fabric of unity essential in a democracy. Although (Continued on Page Sixteen)

EPICURE'S DELIGHT!

Ready to Heat, Eat and Enjoy

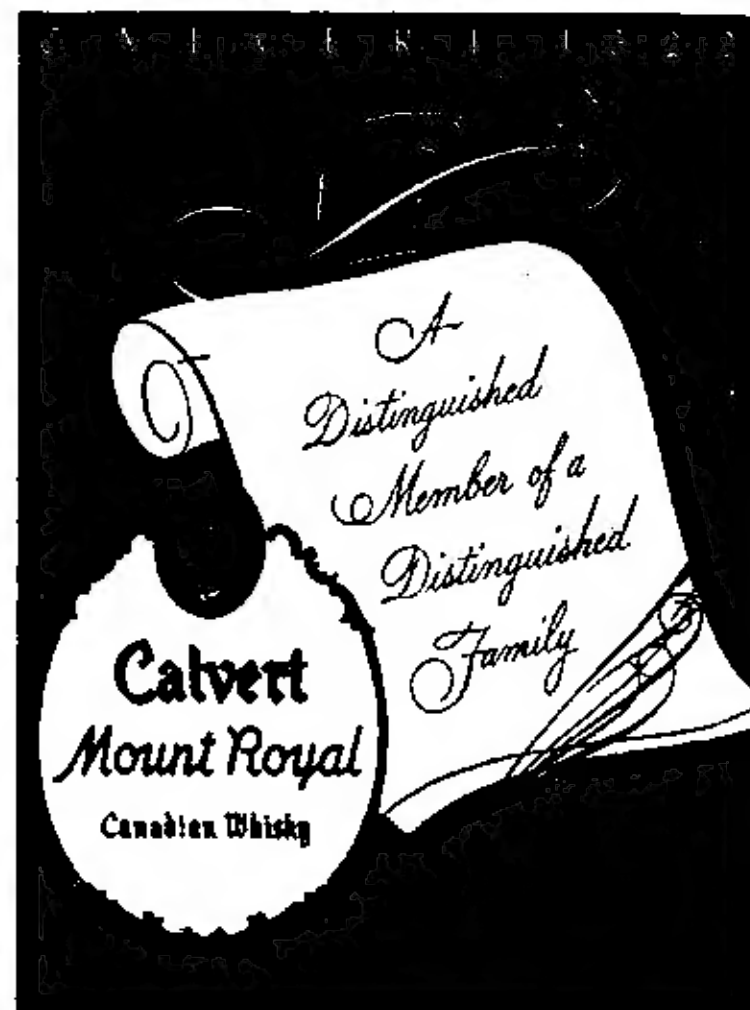

NO MEAT!
NO FAT!

No ingredients used in making Heinz Baked Beans which are contrary to Jewish Dietary Laws

Grandma, no doubt, speaks of Heinz Vegetarian Baked Beans as a "meichel." Her enthusiastic grandchild might call them "swell." A rather free translation! But both of these epicures aptly describe the "pareve," easy-to-fix dish that wins the applause of every "mayvin." Oven-baked until golden-brown and fairly bursting with tenderness, Heinz Vegetarian Beans are drenched in a rich, savory tomato sauce. "Swell" or "meichel," they're mighty good eating!

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

June, the month of brides—and roses! I'm not going to concern myself with brides, but am greatly interested in discussing roses. This universally popular flower should be in every garden in at least one of its varied forms. It is wise to grow hybrid teas and hybrid perpetuals massed together in solid beds. Ramblers, pillar roses and climbers can be used to advantage on trellises or pergolas.

Plans for different types of supports abound. Two trellises and two arbours are shown. If you are not anxious to tackle the curved archway, then stick to a design which has straight lines.

For Outdoor Living

Nothing tastes so good as food cooked in the open over an outdoor fireplace. My teen-age daughter kept at me until I finally broke down and built a barbecue in a secluded corner of the garden. Ever since it was finished there has been a continual round of wicker roasts, picnics and impromptu gatherings in our back yard. I must admit its use has not been restricted to teenagers!

Refuse Burner

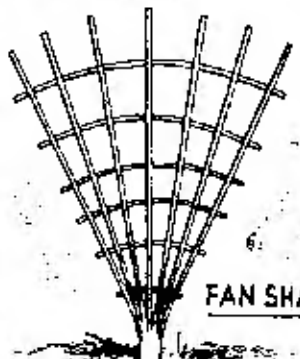

It was a toss-up whether I would include an incinerator with the brick barbecue or not. Over a year ago I saw a combination arrangement—barbecue at one side, incinerator at the other—which was very effective. Because of the layout of my garden I decided on two separate units and intend to follow the incinerator design shown. It should help keep debris about the place to a minimum.

This marks the halfway point of this present series. I'd be delighted to hear from you if you have any comments to make on any of the suggestions already presented here or in the booklet "Around the Home".

The Story Of The Manitoba Floods Is A Tragedy Of Loss

The story of the Manitoba floods is more than mere statistics — so much land under water, so many thousands left homeless and so many sick and crippled removed from hospital to places of safety. The story of the Manitoba floods is a tragedy of widespread suffering, misery, despair and death. For many there is no hope for the future because homes are gone and, when the flood waters subside, they will have nowhere to go and nowhere to live.

For the farmers the flood means lost cattle, destroyed crops, loss of homes and buildings, and loss of personal possessions. Many thousands of words have already been written about the Manitoba floods. The disaster is one of the greatest in the history of Canada or the United States, and will take years to erase and millions of dollars to ease.

The Manitoba Flood Relief Fund has been set up in Winnipeg to collect money for one purpose only. The fund will help people who require help once the provincial and Dominion governments and Red Cross have done their part. Then the fund will provide assistance to the people by repairing or replacing furniture, clothing, bedding, appliances and other necessities to make homes livable.

More than 600 square miles of rich farming land in Southern Manitoba is now inundated. Whole towns have been swamped by the surging flood waters and the streets of these towns are filled with ruined cars, trucks, tractors and wagons, left behind by the flood victims. There was no time to collect personal belongings. There was only time to flee.

Many flood victims left their homes, were evacuated to other cities, towns and provinces and have lost track of their relatives. Women have no idea where their husbands are, and daily radio stations in Manitoba are flooded with messages from anxious relatives seeking their kin.

The misery and the suffering are impossible to describe. A look on an elderly woman's face as she sits in the corner of an evacuation hall tells in a second her suffering and despair. A few words suffice with a working man who spent all his life trying to save enough money for a home, and finally saw it destroyed by the flood waters only a year after it was completed.

The Manitoba Flood Relief Fund has been set up to help such people. It has been organized by volunteers from all parts of Canada who are giving up their time to help make the fund campaign effective. Service clubs, churches, newspapers and radio stations across Canada have answered the appeal, but the help of all the peoples of Canada is required if the fund is to meet the needs of the crisis. Cheques should be made payable to the Manitoba Flood Relief Fund, and envelopes addressed to the fund in Winnipeg.

THE PHILOSOPHER

BY ALFRED POLGAR

An old man stopped me on the street. "Pardon me, I want to go to Doctor Fraenkel's."

"What Fraenkel?"

"Doctor Fraenkel, the specialist. For my kidneys."

"Sorry, but I don't know where that Fraenkel lives."

The man made a gesture as if dismissing an improper and unreasonable demand. "How should I know? I'm from Memel."

A thin little grey beard hung from his chin, slightly lopsided, as though it had been blown out of line by the wind. He wore a padded vest with long sleeves, and on the back of his head was a skull-cap. Glasses. His hands were white, the tips of his finger-nails black. His trousers were newly pressed in a sharp crease, and were frayed at the bottom.

It was raining. We went to the nearest cafeteria to look up Doctor Fraenkel's address in the telephone book. Someone else was using the book just then, and there were a few people waiting for it ahead of us. So we sat down to have a cup of coffee. My companion introduced himself. He was an Orthodox Lithuanian Jew who lived a few miles outside of New York.

He had come to town to consult Doctor Fraenkel, the specialist. He handed me a yellowed visiting card. Under his name was a long sentence in a language I couldn't read. The man from Memel translated it for me. "I exterminate mice, rats, and all kinds vermin. By methods of my own."

"Is that a good business?"

"Here who knows? In Lithuania it was good." He opened his mouth and pointed to quite a few gold teeth in his upper jaw. "It paid for all these."

He had testimonials from the court circles in Czarist Russia. Many, many years ago he had often made guest appearances there, and exterminated the rats in Schlusenburg, the Czars' Summer Palace.

"A difficult profession," I said.

He nodded sadly. "Especially for an Orthodox Jew. In my village there was a holy man who used to blame me for it. 'How can you do that which you do? Is it not written in the Torah thou shalt not kill?' he says to me. It's true, that's what the law says. But even to the law there are exceptions."

He pulled thoughtfully at his hoary little beard. "I have studied carefully in the holy writings what I may do and what I may not do. Listen," and in the voice of a lecturer he proclaimed: "There are creatures that ought to exist and others that ought not to exist. For instance, some field-mice ought to exist because they loosen up the soil. But too many field-mice ought not to exist because they gobble up the crop. So those I can kill..."

"And how about rats?"

"Rats should not exist at all," he announced categorically.

"But," I objected, "God must have wanted rats. Otherwise he wouldn't have created them."

He thought about it for a while. Then, carefully drawing a curve in the air with his index finger, as if to outline the slight detour his logic would have to make, he said in accents of wisdom: "God created them, so that decent men (and here he slapped his chest) would have a way to earn a living."

He saw by my expression that I couldn't entirely accept the theory that vermin were placed on earth for the exterminators. And so he couched his idea in more general terms. "If there was no evil," he said, "good men wouldn't have any business."

"Then you believe that there must be pains in the kidneys because of Doctor Fraenkel?"

"Otherwise how could he live?" He sighed. "I hear he is very expensive."

The telephone book was free at last, and we found the doctor's address.

It was pouring. I complained about the weather. "The weather is bad," the man from Memel admitted, "but it's good for the umbrella business." His philosophy of tolerance annoyed me, and I said somewhat sarcastically: "You seem to be one of the just men for whom the world was made."

He shrugged his shoulders and spread his hands, expressing humble submission to the will of the Lord, and he bent his head far over the table. "None of the thirty-six just men knows he is one of the thirty-six."

"Thirty-six!" I said in amazement. "I would never have guessed there were so many."

But my new acquaintance insisted that it was written in the holy books.

"Thank you," he said, as we parted. "God bless you."

I had walked a few steps when I heard him run after me. "Have you cockroaches?" he asked.

"Sometimes. It's hard to get rid of them, especially in an old house, even if you keep everything very clean."

"Should I come?" he asked helpfully.

"I hope it won't be necessary," I refused his offer. "My landlady has some new stuff for the pests. I've forgotten the name. The man who invented it made a million dollars."

"So!" the philosopher from Memel yelled contentedly, "you see! How could the man invent his stuff if God didn't invent cockroaches? God knows what He's doing." And a broad smile showed the gleam of all his honestly-earned gold teeth. (This story is from Liberal Judaism.)

WARNS ON URGING OF MIGRATION TO ISRAEL

Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve, former dean of Barnard College, deplored Zionist efforts to segregate Jews from "the current of American culture" and to make them feel that they "belong spiritually elsewhere."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the American Council for Judaism held at Henry Hudson Hotel, in New York, Miss Gildersleeve said that self-segregating propaganda efforts, such as proposals to omit "The Merchant of Venice" from school reading lists or picketing the movie of "Oliver Twist," were serving to "intensify acute self-consciousness among American Jews."

"They serve to establish in them," she said, "an inner strain and tension which must be harmful for them psychologically and must tend to split their lives and personalities. The constant urging of migration to Israel as a high religious or racial or national duty seems to develop in some American Jews a feeling of guilt if they do not migrate—a real guilt complex."

Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney, presided at the meeting and Rabbi Elmer Berger, national executive director of the council, also spoke.

Today, because of insulin, a million diabetics live in our country and millions more in other parts of the world. The present outlook for diabetics is hopeful, diet restrictions are few and occupations only slightly limited. But diabetics should keep in constant touch with their physician and follow his instructions to the letter in order to lead a happy, normal life. Your health is your personal affair. Make sure of your good health today by having a complete medical check-up.

Crowded, crooked irregular permanent teeth are frequently part of the price that must be paid for the premature loss, through lack of adequate care, of the baby teeth. Don't allow your child to become a dental cripple by believing in the myth that the foundation teeth are of little importance. Make sure your child visits the dentist at least twice a year. Brushing the teeth is one way to keep them clean and healthy. To be effective, brushing should be done after every meal.

Hotel Man Lived Success Story Of Immigrant

Louis H. Saltzman, retired restaurateur and hotel man and former Long Beach (L. I.) police commissioner and councilman, died in New York in his apartment in the Franconia Hotel, 20 West Seventy-second Street, after a brief illness. His age was 74.

Born in Odessa, Russia, Mr. Saltzman came to the United States in 1892 with his family. He began his career assembling old-type gas heaters in a factory on Franklin Street. Then he sold newspapers on the Bowery, and next became a sleeve operator in a shirt factory.

A younger brother had worked with a printing concern, and Mr. Saltzman decided to go into the printing business with him. With $3.75 they bought a decrepit second-hand press, which they operated in their Kington Street bedroom. Neighbors complained of the noise, and they moved their "plant" to the cellar, paying $6 a month rent.

Mr. Saltzman heard that Henry C. Miner, proprietor of Miner's famous Bowery Theatre and two others, was printing his programs himself. He finally got an interview with him, and came away with a contract to print Miner's three programs free in return for the advertising privileges in them. Other theatre ventures were added, and the printing business thrived.

A few years later, Mr. Saltzman married and left the business to the management of his brothers. He became a solicitor for a firm making advertising calendars. On a business trip he met a friend, a lunch-room proprietor, who persuaded him to start a lunch room with him in Philadelphia. Thus Mr. Saltzman entered the restaurant business.

Two years later he became manager of a summer hotel in Rockland County. Then he started a little restaurant in Ann Street. Later he interested D. A. Schulte, head of the cigar company, and the two opened six cafes in New York. With the approach of prohibition, Mr. Saltzman quit this business, opened an unsuccessful place in Brooklyn, and then founded the Fairview Hotel in Spring Valley, N. Y.

In 1919 he founded the Palace and Shelbourne Hotels in Edgemere, L. I. Then he opened a restaurant at 106 Duane Street and later operated the Brighton and Nassau Hotels in Long Beach, L. I., where he also engaged successfully in the real estate business. He served there as councilman and police commissioner, and was active in arranging outings for crippled and underprivileged children. He also operated a hotel in Lakewood, N. J.

In 1932 he founded the Floridian Hotel in Miami Beach. The next year he established the Cafe Loyale at 521 Fifth Avenue, which he operated until 1944. From 1931 until last year he managed the Grove Club in Far Rockaway. Surviving are his widow, Rose; three brothers, Julius, Henry and Jesse; and a sister, Mrs. Edith Lapham.

Many industrial employees, through lack of knowledge or carelessness, fail to take advantage of the safeguards provided by their employers. In occupations where safety goggles, clothing or respirators are necessary, it is the employee's responsibility to see that safety equipment provided by the management is correctly used. It is often easier to prevent occupational diseases than to cure them.

Children's health and lives should not be endangered through neglect to immunize. Vaccination prevents smallpox, toxoid prevents diphtheria, and whooping cough vaccine checks whooping cough.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

I found some profit and much pleasure in reading our own Bernard Bloomfield's "Israel Diary." The volume consists of a collection of letters written by Bernard to his wife, Nery, during his recent pilgrimage to Israel in the company of his brother, Major Louis Bloomfield. The writer, in his characteristic manner of plain speaking, gives us a realistic account of events, places, and persons and the diary reveals our friend as a true lover of Zion. It is a personal account and hence one can hardly find fault with the author as to his personal reactions and judgments.

Some may think Mr. Bloomfield too critical of the erstwhile British administration in the Holy Land, especially under Bevin's leadership. However, knowing Mr. Bloomfield, we feel his criticism of the British is that of a lover of the British tradition of fair play, who is all the more grieved at the injustices meted out to Palestinian Jewry by the British Colonial Office during Israel's struggle for independence.

Mr. Bloomfield would be guilty of a lack of self-respect, had he neglected to speak frankly of the mandatory's behaviour during the last few years, prior to the heroic emergence of the State of Israel, which was, for the most part made possible through the brave efforts of the Jews of Palestine in co-operation with world Jewry. Neither the author or this reviewer or any Jew will ever wish to forget that it was Great Britain, through the historic Balfour Declaration, that started Israel back on the road to Statehood. We rejoice, too, that a renewed friendship is now in the making between Israel and Britain. This is all to the good for the peace of the world.

One of the finest chapters in the volume is the author's vivid description of his trip to the Negev. Thus he writes: "The captain pointed out that this was the first time since the cessation of hostilities that a civilian group was going through the Negev to Aqaba, or Eilat, as the area is called. He told us the trip would take three days and would cover 250 miles each day. The cavalcade of trucks had instructions to keep together, if for any reason one stopped, all were to stop — Sunday, at about 5 a.m., the dawn was just beginning to break over the eastern hills, silhouetting the minaret of the Beersheba mosque which was delicately etched in the soft morning light. We all were settled, with our weapons at hand, in four army trucks, powerful enough to go anywhere. The signal was given and all the trucks filled out on the flat, dusty road and headed south for the Negev. In the lead was a jeep with army personnel and rifles, and in the rear a command car and another jeep. Quite a cavalcade! Each truck had an officer with a rifle, just in case, as we were going through 250 miles of desert and, in some places, very close to the Transjordan boundaries. What complete desolation! The heat of the sun simmered with a hot mistiness below in the valleys. Here one fully realizes the meaning of the word 'wilderness'. And I seemed then to understand the Bible more clearly and the wonderful expressiveness of so many of its passages. The imagination of our biblical forefathers, slowly traversing these wild desolate places on their beasts of burden, or on foot, must have been powerfully stimulated by the environment in which they lived. The twenty-third Psalm of David, 'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil' could only have been conceived by a brain that had known such places as these."

The author is thrilled with all that the Jews in Israel have achieved. He has seen how the Jews have pushed back the desert and converted the neglected soil of Palestine into a beautiful garden. He beholds the new Israel as the bastion of democracy in the Near East and we agree with him that the new Israel offers a pattern for the Arabs what can be done in work of regeneration for the benefit of mankind.

SAYS INVESTMENT

Economic Development Staff of the State Department, declared that "the continued success of Ampel means progress towards Israel's goal of achieving higher stages of economic development and standard of living."

He praised the Israeli Government for its enactment of legislation to stimulate private foreign investment in Israel, observing that the measures assured the convertibility each year of "a reasonable portion of the returns derived from the investment."

Benjamin P. Harris, chairman of Ampel's executive committee, in a review of the corporation's history, announced that its assets now amounted to more than $13,000,000 and its capital resources close to $11,000,000. He said that American business was interested in Israel's market "which offers a comparatively good opportunity for outlet of American capital, of American machinery, of American goods."

The new building houses Ampel's affiliated corporations, including Ampel Purchasing Service, Inc.,

American Israeli Shipping Company, Inc. (partly owned), Israel America Line, (partly owned), Israel Securities Corporation, American-Israeli Housing Company, Shikun, Inc., and Campal-Canadian Palestine Trading Co., Ltd.

COUNCIL PLEADS

Leo Pfeffer, assistant director of the commission on law, pointed out that Protestants, Catholics and Jews differ among themselves and have varying opinions on such issues as separation of church and state, religion in public schools and Federal aid to education, in contrast to the common misconception that each group has a fixed and clearly defined position on these issues. This misconception, he stressed, was in itself a contributory factor in inter-religious tension.

The meeting ended with the reelection of Irving Kane of Cleveland as chairman of the Council; and of Sidney Hollander, of Baltimore; and Bernard H. Trager of Bridgeport, as vice-chairman. Lester A. Jaffe of Cincinnati, was re-elected secretary; and David L. Ullman, of Philadelphia was elected treasurer. Isaiah M. Minkoff of New York was re-appointed executive director.

A Remedy For The Effects Of Too Many Communal Campaigns

BY H. M. CAISERMAN, OF THE CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS

The multiplicity of Jewish campaigns and all kinds of collections, some for the same causes under a variety of names, has affected negatively nearly all the Jewish communities in Canada, but particularly the unorganized middle and smaller communities.

The first effect of the multiplicity of campaigns is the reducing of active Jewish life to the pre-occupation of campaigning for funds, pressures for funds, propagandizing for funds, exhaustive preparations for each of the numerous campaigns, a bombardment of propaganda literature, and all techniques to reach the individual Jews and stimulate the giving. A second result or effect of the multiplicity of collections is the resentful giving even for the worthiest cause; a denial of service and leadership, because the leader must be the chief canvasser, some time the only canvasser. Another result is a refusal to attend public meetings for any cause and a slow detachment from community Jewish interests.

In more than a few communities, a process of dissolution of Jewish communal interest is noticed. This is the cumulated price the Canadian Jewish community is paying for the protagonists of the unlimited multiplicity of campaigns, legitimate and illegitimate, plus collections of every description. That such a situation is not in the interests of the communities concerned is obvious, and certainly not in the interest of united Canadian Jews is also obvious.

The welfare community or the federated communities have the advantage by being day-by-day active organizations, and therefore able to discover failures in their programs or shortcomings, and find proper corrections. A fine example is the Toronto Welfare Jewish community. A few years ago it discovered that the greatest energies invested in the raising of the funds of their united campaign, and their social services, did not arouse the interest of the community in the educational, cultural and religious fields, and they looked for a solution.

The organization of communities is also a Congress responsibility and I was invited to organize the Toronto Jewish community into an assembly of organizations. Within three or four months, the assembly was established with the participation of most Jewish organizations of Toronto, and besides the cooperation with the Welfare Fund in its yearly campaign, they are now slowly developing a composite educational, cultural and religious program for further uniting the community.

Another example: The Welfare Fund community of Winnipeg enjoys the reputation of one of the most democratically constituted bodies of its kind. I imagine that among the engineers were men like William Keller, B. Sheps, and a few others of the progressive group of Jewish leaders who proposed and obtained from the other leaders an agreement; that in the directorium of the Welfare Fund, not only the "givers" be represented, but also the representatives of the "receivers".

In the smaller Jewish communities, when organized, every Jew is included. It is also true that Jewish life in the Canadian communities is not uniform. But in some regions, approximate uniformity exists. Let us choose a region where the Jewish inhabitants are "near Orthodox". For such a region, the Congress proposed the following program for its organized community council.

A synagogue sub-committee is obliged: 1) To stimulate the men, women, and youth of the community to attend regularly the services in the synagogue. 2) To acquaint the community with the "Kashruth" rules, and the meaning of Jewish holidays. 3) To see to it that the observance in the synagogue is strictly adhered to and to attend services punctually. 4) To arrange that all important Jewish causes, Canadian and overseas, be themes of the preaching in the synagogue. 5) To be represented in the organized community council in order to protect the religious interests of the community.

The sub-committee on Jewish education is obliged: 1) To supervise the teacher and program for the Jewish children of school age. 2) To invite yearly, or every two years, a known pedagogue, and to examine the children, and recommend changes where necessary. 3) To influence the members of the community, to inscribe every Jewish child of school age, in the talmud torah or school, and see that they attend regularly. 4) To stimulate celebrations of national and religious holidays. 5) To organize a youth group in the community; if a Young Judaea already functions to include in their Zionist program also the program of the Jewish Youth Council of Canada. 6) To organize a children's choir where possible. 7) To popularize in the community the Jewish movements, Jewish organizations, and the problems of the community. 8) To be in contact with the non-Jewish youth groups of the community and co-operate in the civic, patriotic, and cultural projects.

A cultural sub-committee is to organize the same programs that the communities of St. John, N.B., and Sydney, N.S. have conducted, namely: 1) A pantomime of all Jewish holidays including the Sabbath, and a commentator. 2) A seven-week seminar of Zionism and Israel. 3) Five consecutive Sunday programs, five chosen chapters of Jewish History, and a musical number. 4) Five consecutive weekly lectures on the best five Jewish or Hebrew books which have recently appeared. 5) Four consecutive weekly lectures: 1) Defence of our interests in Canada and the Canadian Jewish Congress. 2) The Jewish educational situation in Canada. 3) The various parties in Zionism. 4) Musical concert of Jewish music; piano, violin, or vocal.

In other words, these should be about 25 weekly opportunities to assemble the community for a cultural purpose. The Community Council that in the first year will introduce such a program, mobilize the intelligent individuals in the community, and improve the program the following year, will attract the true leading spirits to service. Such a community will be a corrective to any dissolution-danger and re-establish normal community life, able to deal intelligently with money-raising and all problems of community importance.
